Outstanding Cloud Output Management Solution

Canon uniFLOW Online has won a Buyers Lab (BLI) 2024 Pick Award for Outstanding Cloud Output Management Solution from Keypoint Intelligence thanks to its...

- Outstanding fit for distributed working environments
- Broad device support for Canon and third-party hardware
- Various document security options to protect valuable information
- Customizable print policies to reduce costs and environmental impact
- Modern device UI for improved ease of use

“Canon uniFLOW Online stands as an exceptional solution that enables businesses to streamline and manage print and scan tasks right in the cloud,” said Lee Davis, Senior Analyst in Keypoint Intelligence’s Workplace Group. “This platform continues to set the standard of what a valuable cloud output management solution looks like, providing organizations with the flexibility and security they can come to expect in a modern workplace solution.”

Not only does Canon uniFLOW Online have the functions of a high-class output management platform, but its user interface compliments what it is capable of doing. Between its to-the-point workflows, flexible login options, and enhanced settings for print and scan activities, the solution streamlines and empowers user activity right at the printer or MFP for Canon devices as well as third-party hardware. As a cloud solution that can be accessed in-office and remotely, security is of utmost importance—which is why administrators using Canon uniFLOW Online are able to easily manage users and groups at one source, thereby reducing IT maintenance.

“Canon uniFLOW Online remains a game changer for any business looking to improve its digital transformation (DX) efforts to accommodate working environments of today,” said Keith Haas, Solutions Analyst in Keypoint Intelligence’s Workplace Group. “It is no wonder that this solution has received an award from Keypoint Intelligence for six straight years at this point. And with each update, it is clear that Canon's uniFLOW team is actively addressing the concerns and needs of regular users and administrators alike who are leveraging everything this solution has to offer."
